Biography

One of the youngest members of the team, the 20-year-old Swiss rider learned the ropes in 2009. After joining the team full-time in April, she quickly posted a handful of top-10s to reveal her promise. In June, she just missed a medal in the Swiss national time trial championships, taking fourth, and rode to ninth in the road race. A strong time trialist and climber, Aubry has stage-race potential and dreams of someday winning a stage race. For 2010, she will continue to gain international experience and take aim at the World Championships.
